DECLARATION OF LAURA GANZERO

I, Laura Ganzero, under penalty of perjury, swear/affirm as follows:

1. My name is Laura Ganzero.
2. I was employed by TSE Group as a server at B.B. King Blues Club ("B.B. King") from the February 2005 until May of 2006.
3. I was informed by B.B. King's management, specifically Gabby Brechner, that its practice is to charge an employee for a customer's bill when that customer does not pay the bill. For example, when a customer walks out without paying his bill (a “walk-out”), the restaurant forces the waiter to pay for the customer’s bill.

4. I was several times forced to pay for walk-outs out of my nightly tips.

5. My paychecks consistently reflected unexplainable $5 deductions. Upon inquiry, I was told by Ben Javareck that the deduction went to cover porters’ salaries.

6. When I worked in excess of 10 hours in a day, B.B. King did not pay me New York’s “spread of hours” premium.

7. B.B. King often charges mandatory gratuities to customers for private parties. When I worked at such private parties, I did not receive any portion of those gratuities.

8. From the beginning of 2005 until October of 2005, I was paid an hourly wage of $3.30, instead of the New York minimum wage at the time, $3.85.

9. B.B. King’s practice was to require servers to tip out to expediteres, busboys, and bartenders from their own cash. As a result, B.B. King deducted too much money for our withholding taxes. For example, if on a given night, my tips were $300, and my required tip-out was $100, I was required to pay the tip-outs in cash from my own pocket. However, when reporting my income, B.B. King would not have factored out the tip-outs, and I would have been taxed as though my gross income was $300, when it was in fact $200.

10. I was not paid at all for my first five days working at B.B. King.

I swear/affirm, under penalty of perjury, that the above and foregoing information is true and correct.
